

COMIC RELIEF 2015

This time round for Comic Relief, I raised £67.25. I would've made more but it proved a disaster.

Firstly last minute cakes the night before, as you've guessed or I've told you they didn't go to plan. My plan was to make loads of cakes with chocolate brownies being the star of the show but none of them survived as it came out like faeces' of someone with a serious case of the runs. My angel cakes kinda survived but were still edible even though there were only 6. And 2 of my chocolate muffins survived as well.

The planned event where I dressed in a monkey onesie was practically the only thing that went well, so think if you were in Norton Park Buildings on 13 March, you may've been lucky enough to spot me.

At the end of this I raised £67.25, and because it was a shambles I went to the local tesco with my own money, bought some tins of food and left it in the basket for a food bank.