

Hexakosiohexakontahexaphobia
& Hippotomonstresesquippadaliophobia

By

Alan Masterton
6 September 2013
Final Draft

Alan Masterton (C)

alanmasterton.yolasite.com

INT. CLASSROOM 2PM

FADE IN

STEWART, 14, slim, in school uniform.

MR WILSON, 58, shirt & tie, dress trousers, black shoes.

Mr Wilson is writing a selection of long words on the blackboard because he likes to be a bit of a smart arse.

Stewart is reading these words and is going absolutely crazy as his 2 main fears are of long words and the number 666.

Mr Wilson gets a smarmy voice.

MR WILSON

As you can see on the blackboard
I've written long words with the definition beside it I'll pick on someone who's been asking for it all day and get them to read each of the words....

Pause

.....Stewart repeat after me.
Hexakosioheakontahexaphobia.

STEWART

Aaaarghhh.....

Stewart takes a deep breath.

.....Hex-ak-ontay.

Mr Wilson interrupts.

MR WILSON

Wronnngggggg! It's hexakosiohexakontahexaphobia. It's fear of the number 666.

The class laugh as Stewart sits back in fear.

MR WILSON

Now this one ummmmmmm....

Mr Wilson looks round the class.

.....Stewart. It's the name of a chemical.
Pneumonoultramicroscopicsillicovolcanoconeosis.

Stewart gets a huge fright and lunges out of his chair screaming running out of class room.

(MORE)

(CONTINUED)

MR WILSON (cont'd)
Hmmm, he must have the fear long
words or as it's known in one word
hippotomonstresesquippadaliophobia.

FADE OUT